Kenyan snatches repeat win

Race Weekend.

Elite runner beats countryman by less than a second

JOE LOFARO
joe.lofaro@metronews.ca

As far as races go, it doesn't get much closer than 0.8 seconds.

By that razor-thin margin, elite runner Laban Moiben of Kenya defeated fellow Kenyan competitor Julius Karinga, and was crowned the 2012 champion of the Ottawa Race Weekend marathon.

In the last few metres, the two were neck and neck, running with their knees high and their eyes locked on the white finish-line banner.

Then, Moiben, 28, inched forward just in time to finish the 42.2-kilometre course with a time of 2:09:12. In doing so, he established a new personal best, or "PB," improving on the 2:10:18 he ran in 2011, when he was also crowned champion.

Karinga, 32, clocked in at 2:09:13. Moiben said he was surprised that Karinga was so close behind him.

Moiben said that the course was "very tough" but that the fans helped push him towards the finish line.

"I was very happy because this community was very strong, cheering me," said Moiben.

Among female runners, Ethiopia's Yeshe Esayas was the first in her category to cross the finish line. Her time was 2:28:45.

Orillia, Ont., native Lisa Avery was the top Canadian woman, clocking in at 2:42:52.

Meanwhile, Toronto's Re-jean Chiasson was the first Canadian man to step over the finish line. But it wasn't his best time: he made it in 2:19:54.

Under partly cloudy skies and a light breeze, Sunday's marathon attracted more than 5,000 runners from all over the world who share the same passion.

Even though they all ran

Laban Moiben of Kenya celebrates at the finish line of the Ottawa Race Weekend marathon after outrunning fellow Kenyan Julius Karinga by only a fraction of a second. JOE LOFARO/METRO the same race, the winners had different ideas in mind when asked how they would celebrate their victories.

Moiben said he had planned to celebrate with fellow Kenyans at the Kenyan high commissioner's house, while Esayas's husband, Debele Senbeta, said she would eat pasta and vegetables.

As for the top Canadians, Avery and Chiasson said they both wanted to get their hands on a big, greasy post-race burger and a beer. Or two.

Tragedy. Fire happened same day as call by coroner's inquest to make sprinkler systems mandatory in retirement homes

A Hawkesbury woman lost not only her home, but also her sister and brother-in-law in a fire at the Place Mont Roc retirement residence on Friday.

Alberta Bonin, 93, lived on the first floor and made it out of the building, but Marie-Anne Bonin, 84, and Jean-Paul Bonin, 87, who lived on the top floor, did not.

Sophie Bonin, granddaughter of Alberta, said her great-uncle Jean-Paul would have had trouble leaving the home because he could not walk.

"He was stuck up there. It's a tragedy," she said.

Alberta managed to get out quickly. "She was on the first floor, so she was outside before it became worse," said Sophie. "She's doing OK, well, as OK as you can be."

Alberta is staying with family in Hawkesbury and will not be returning to the home if it reopens, said Sophie.

"It's a big tragedy — we're all in shock," she said.

Head of the Ontario Association of Fire Chiefs Kevin Foster said the fire was "made even more tragic" because it occurred on the same day as a coroner's inquest into a fatal fire at a retirement home in Orillia, which, like Place Mont Roc, did not have sprinklers.

Place Mont Roc complied with the current fire code, according to the Hawkesbury fire department.

Children, abducted in 2008, turn up in Mexico

Lost and found.

Investigators found children with their father and a cousin in a house equipped with security cameras and barbed wire

Two Winnipeg children at the centre of a high-profile child-abduction case have been located in Mexico, Winnipeg police have announced.

Siblings Dominic and Abby Maryk were abducted in August of 2008 when they were aged seven and six, respectively. They were on a court-ordered visit with their father, Kevin Maryk, when they vanished.

Since then, their mother, Emily Cablek, and Winnipeg police have worked hard to find the missing pair, holding press conferences and posting videos in 2009 and 2011 for the safe return of the children.

Police would not comment further, saying that details will be made public during a press conference on Monday at 11 a.m.

Mexican newspaper Milenio said a Guadalajara man saw a television news report that mentioned the missing children, who bore a striking resemblance to two children who for the previous couple of weeks had been living in a home in the area of Jardines de los Puentes in Zapopan.

He contacted local police and federal authorities but "no one listened to me," so he was put in contact with Juan Manuel Estrada, who heads the FIND Foundation, a group that helps locate missing people in Mexico.

Estrada contacted Interpol Mexico, which found the two children, their father and a cousin, identified as Cody McKay, also from Winnipeg.

Miami police shot and killed a naked man who mauled another man on a downtown causeway off-ramp on Saturday, chewing on his victim's face as horrified drivers looked on.

Local media reported that gunshots were heard at around 2 p.m. Saturday on the MacArthur Causeway off-ramp.

Witnesses reported seeing a naked man attacking the other man by viciously chewing on his face.

A woman who saw the two men fighting summoned a police officer, who instructed the naked man to back away. When the alleged attacker refused to comply, the officer shot him several times.

Miami police confirmed the shooting in a press release but did not release the identities of the men.

Police did not provide details of the incident, but sources told CBS News that after the attacker was shot dead, police and paramedics were able to rush the victim, whose face had been mauled to the point of being unrecognizable, to Jackson Memorial hospital's trauma centre.

He is listed in serious condition but is expected to survive.

Javier Ortiz, a spokesman for the Fraternal Order of Police in Miami, told the Associated Press that the officer who fired at the suspect "is a hero and saved a life."

CP Rail. Ottawa to table back-to-work legislation

The Harper government is expected to introduce legislation ordering striking workers at Canadian Pacific Railway Ltd. back to work on Monday after talks with the union broke off.

CP Rail and the union representing 4,800 workers who have been on strike since Wednesday confirmed that talks had broken off with little hope of resumption.

Labour Minister Lisa Raitt

said she still hoped the parties could agree on a process that would end the strike, but made clear she would not wait long.

Raitt said government officials have been talking with impacted industries, farmers and the mining sector, and the reports are that the strike is "starting to actually affect their operations."

Facebook's small investors bitter, divided on next step

Wall Street. In lawsuits, Morgan Stanley is accused of reserving negative analysis of Facebook for favoured clients get price for the opening two days beforehand. Yet when the chance arose to buy into the company's $38-a-share initial public offering, he seized it.

"I figured: Nothing ventured, nothing gained," said Hines, 61, a retiree and private investor in Boston.

Now, he wishes he'd listened to his misgivings. Instead, Hines watched with dismay as the stock languished on its first day, then slid on its second.

As the lead underwriter for Facebook's IPO, Morgan Stanley was expected to set shares at the highest price it thinks the market will bear. But investors have also come to expect that an initial share price will be low enough so the stock can climb on the first day, when interest typically peaks.

Looking back, some individual investors say they recognize that Facebook's initial $38 US stock price was too lofty. It was more than 80 times the company's 2011 earnings per share. The average for companies in the Standard & Poor's 500 index is far cheaper, about 19 times earnings.

Among those who blame their brokers is Joshua Freeman, who said he bought 200 shares in the IPO after his broker at Morgan Stanley Smith Barney asked if he wanted in. Freeman says he's considering closing his account at Morgan Stanley.

Morgan Stanley disputes the allegations. "We have clearly put clients' interests first by correcting pricing on some trades that were mispriced because of trading glitches beyond our control," the company said in a statement.

IS THE LIBRARY TOO QUIET FOR ITS OWN GOOD?

URBAN COMPASS
Steve Collins
ottawa@metronews.ca

I just ended an ignominious stretch in the Ottawa Public Library's bad books, having borrowed a novel, taken it with me to visit my sister in Toronto, and, inevitably, left it behind.

That was back in February and it's a long story. Let's simply say I had a little difficulty recovering the book and getting it back to Ottawa. (The title of my literary hostage has been withheld to protect me from you, just in case you were next on the waiting list to borrow it.)

As a somewhat experienced deadbeat, I strategically parcelled out my three online renewals to stall for time, but the clock eventually ran out and gentle "friendly reminder" emails began arriving. After almost a month of these, I had visions of a library SWAT team arrayed outside my house, politely but firmly whispering ultimatums and threats to my credit rating through a megaphone.

When I finally got my hands on the book this month and guiltily returned it, though, my penalty was a $12 fine, without even a disapproving look from library staff as I paid.

I try to imagine attempting this level of delinquency with almost any other entity, public or private, and the punitive whupping it would likely entail. In a world where it's become normal for your phone or Internet provider to cheerfully bleed you for every minute or megabyte over your usage cap, the OPL is still charging a milk-money fine of 50 cents a day for an overdue book, with a limit of $25.

It's almost as if they'd really rather just get their stuff back than fleece the negligent for easy revenue.

Taken for granted

"Plans for a new central library, in the works since at least the late '90s, have been shelved repeatedly."

It's a civilized policy, and one that keeps borrowing affordable for everyone, but I sometimes wonder if this laid-back attitude serves to keep the library somewhat below the civic radar in Ottawa. Its 33 branches are well-used, but can also be taken for granted.

The library takes 18 dollars out of every thousand in city-dwellers' taxes (1.8 per cent) and receives a roughly proportional amount of official attention. Plans for a new central library, in the works since at least the late '90s, have been shelved repeatedly.

Once upon a time, the new facility was expected to open in 2006. The last time anyone even mentioned a date, it was 2014, but, so far, the project lacks the basic ingredient of a proposed address. There's some talk of buying the former Ottawa Technical High School, but, at the moment, it seems as if talk is all it is.

Sexier spending priorities like light rail and Lansdowne Park have taken precedence, and the new library keeps getting bumped down the list as a non-essential "nice-to-have." Meanwhile, the main library, which hasn't had a major overhaul since it was built in 1974, crams more users into its 88,000 square feet every year.

Have we grown complacent about libraries in Ottawa? Not necessarily. It could be argued we've never been anything but. In 1896, Ottawa voters rejected the expense of establishing a library in the first place. Only after American philanthropist Andrew Carnegie stepped up with a $100,000 grant did the nation's capital open its first public library, in 1906.

In the absence of help from crusading tycoons (there's never one around when you need one), OPL might have to look elsewhere for funding this time.

Yet another piece of city infrastructure that already seems to be on a faster track to completion than a new library is a casino that would replace the slots at Rideau-Carleton Raceway and compete for revenue with Gattineau's Lac Leamy Casino. Perhaps a partnership could be worked out with the Ontario Lottery and Gaming Corp. on a hybrid facility — a few slot machines amid the microfilm readers, perhaps, or table games at the reference desk?

Alternately, they could start charging the city late fees until the new library's finally built.

Men in Black 3 takes down Avengers

The suits have knocked off the superheroes at the box office. Will Smith and Tommy Lee Jones' sequel Men in Black 3 debuted as the No. 1 movie in the U.S. over the weekend with $55 million from Friday to Sunday. That bumps Disney's The Avengers into second-place after three blockbuster weekends on top for the superhero sensation. The Avengers took in $37 million over the three days to push its domestic total to $514 million and become only the fourth movie ever to top half a billion dollars.

Nichols heads into sci-fi territory with Continuum

New TV series.

Actress plays cop from 2077 sent back to the present in Canadian sci-fi drama airing on Showcase

scene@metronews.ca

Where many actors snub sci-fi and fantasy as frivolous genres where canny ideas and special effects take precedence over story and character, Rachel Nichols sees them as immersive playgrounds.

"I love the escapism and using your imagination," says the actress, whose past credits include Conan the Barbarian, GI Joe: The Rise of Cobra and JJ Abrams' Star Trek reboot. "Given the genre it's completely believable and it's fun."

Her love affair with make-believe continues with her starring role in the new Canadian series Continuum, which premiered on Showcase last night.

Nichols plays Keira Cameron, a cop from the year 2077 accidentally sent back to the present where she tries to stop a political uprising before it can change the course of history.

Keira is "a little bit robotic," she says. "Human relations are not her strong suit." But while her hard-boiled intensity is a hallmark of the series' first episode, Nichols says the character will get a chance to loosen up over the course of the show's 10-episode first season. "The fish out of water theme gets played with."

The show's creators already have story arcs for the first two seasons tentatively planned out in what Nichols calls the show's Bible.

But Nichols prefers to discover things as her character does. "I don't like to look at that," she says. "I like to be on a need to know basis."

Unsurprisingly, Continuum is shot in Vancouver, a city that's played host to a bevy of sci-fi shows in the past includ-

TV and film

Throughout her career Nichols has flipped back and forth between television and film making with regular appearances on Criminal Minds and Alias as well as landing dramatic roles in Shop Girl and Charlie Wilson's War.

- But where there was once a stigma against film actors doing television, these days, few people make a distinction between the two mediums. "I like bouncing back and forth," she says. "That great divide doesn't exist anymore."

- More importantly, she says, the time it takes to get a project to air is significantly shorter than getting a film into theatres. "TV is almost like instant gratification."

ing the X-Files, Stargate SG-1 and Battlestar Galactica.

Despite her previous roles, Nichols had never visited the city until this January, but she thinks the cityscape lends itself to future worlds. "It's so believable, the architecture with the arenas," she says. "It is the future."

Actor avoids stereotypes in hockey hit Goon

Montreal actor Marc-Andre Grondin was fortunate enough to land his first English-language role in the gleefully violent hockey hit Goon, which pounded down its Hollywood competition to top the Canadian box office upon its release in February.

But given how the Quebecois actor exaggerated his slight accent for the role of the druggy, underachieving sniper Xavier Laflamme, he said the offers haven't exactly been rolling in.

"With the accent I have in the movie, I don't know if I'm going to get more jobs in English," laughed Grondin during a recent interview in Toronto.

Indeed, the 28-year-old speaks English with far more fluid confidence in person than he does in the film, which cast him as a hot-shot scorer relegated to the minors after his talent dissolved in a haze of drugs, booze and women.

The roommate to the sweetly savage titular character played by Seann William Scott, Laflamme eventually begins to rediscover his scoring touch as their rag-tag squad climbs the standings.

Grondin was already friends with Montreal actor Jay Baruchel — who co-wrote and stars in the film, which will be released on DVD on Tuesday — prior to landing the role. So he felt comfortable relaying his concerns about an early draft of the script that saddled his character with a few too many Quebec stereotypes.

"I was just like: 'I think we need to tweak it a bit because I really don't want to be the guy who (makes) everyone in Quebec say traitor!'" said Grondin, who starred in 2005's Genie Award-winning C.R.A.Z.Y.

"I can laugh at myself, I can laugh at my culture, but ... I didn't want the fact that the character is French-Canadian to be the comic relief."

Glee star Cory Monteith takes a stand for at-risk youth

THE WORD
Kate Webb
scene@metronews.ca

Before 30-year-old Victoria native Cory Monteith was belting out ballads on hit TV musical comedy Glee, he was a troubled youth struggling with drug addiction and the issues that often come with a broken home.

These days he's a goodwill ambassador for RE*Generation, an initiative to address youth homelessness supported by Virgin Unite, the charitable arm of Sir Richard Branson's Virgin Group of companies.

Metro sat down with the six-foot-three triple-threat in Vancouver on Friday to talk about how more than $50,000 in grants from Virgin Unite will help local at-risk youth. The money is going to the Broadway Youth Resource Centre, and a theatre program for youth called Project Limelight.

(Sorry, Glee fans, questions about the show and his budding romance with co-star Lea Michele were strictly off limits!)

M: How did you become an ambassador for RE*Generation?

CM: I started with RE*Generation on behalf of Virgin Unite three years ago in Toronto, something like that, raising awareness of Canada's national youth homeless problem: how many homeless youth there are in the country. It's such a developed, wealthy nation really, per capita. That shouldn't be a problem.

M: Is that something you saw a lot of growing up on Vancouver Island?

CM: Sure. It's strange to grow up in a place like Victoria. It's beautiful. It's a postcard, with all these tourists coming from all over the world to see this beautiful city, you know, miniature little British town, and you have kids sleeping the streets and stuff in sleeping bags, in doorways. It doesn't seem congruent, it doesn't work, doesn't seem right, and I think it's systematic. It's not a matter of resources or ability to fix the problem, it's just a matter of finding the people that are actually going to do something about it at a community level.

M: What does Project Limelight mean to you personally?

CM: This is the same woman (Maureen Webb, co-founder of the Project Limelight Society), the same program under a different guise, that started me and sort of ignited my passion for the arts. It's the reason I started acting, so my heart is close to this program because it's inspiring kids to do something different, get involved in their community. The networking that happens for these kids, they get to all know each other. It's priceless, and it brings people together, and it keeps people out of trouble. It did for me.

Mommy shaming: From 'Tan Mom' to Time mag

Parenting. Is it ever OK to judge mothers in the spotlight?

LINDSAY CROSS
Mommyish.com

The Olympics are coming this summer. If "Mommy Shaming" was up for a medal, there would be some fierce competition. Just how critical can we be when it comes to moms and their choices? I've recently gotten some first-hand knowledge that proves what a serious issue this has become.

I was shocked when the simple act of allowing my daughter to occasionally put on make-up for special events created an Internet backlash that didn't just take up mommy message boards, but landed a sidebar on the Yahoo homepage. While I never expected everyone to agree with me, because that's just ridiculous, I had no idea that so many people would choose to make huge assumptions about me and my life based on a five-minute snapshot of my daughter and me.

I was told that I'm a horrible parent who doesn't know how to discipline my child and might be "inviting" predators to assault her. All this over lip gloss and blush.

But the more I thought about this surprising outrage, the more I realized that I was just a small blip on the radar for mommy shaming everywhere.

For whatever reason, our culture has decided that it's perfectly acceptable to tear apart women for their parenting shortcomings. In fact, we seem to enjoy it.

The perfect example might be the story of "Tan Mom," a New Jersey woman who was arrested for possibly endangering her daughter by taking her to the tanning bed.

This recent Time cover has caused much examination of mommyhood.

Patricia Krentcil's seriously bizarre appearance sparked a media frenzy, discussions of tanning addiction and of course, concern for Krentcil's five-year-old daughter who turned up to school with a severe sunburn.

But this story has been so much more than a mom who seems to have a severe addiction. It's been a huge joke, appearing on SNL and prompting an insulting exchange with Jersey Shore's Snookie. Before we even know exactly what happened, we've all judged, tried and convicted this woman. She claims her daughter got burnt playing out in the sun, and if you see the little girl's red hair and pale complexion, it's easy to assume that she reacts really strongly to a little sunlight.

"Tan Mom" is a reminder that addiction can take many forms. It might even be a situation in which this little girl needs a new home until her mother can come to terms with her mental health issues. But did it need to be a circus where we all point and laugh?

Whatever the questionable

Some moms, like June Cleaver from Leave it to Beaver, were considered by some TV viewers the perfect mothers. H/O parenting practice is, there's probably a group of upstanding citizens ready to rip a mom to shreds because of it.

Look at the controversial Time magazine cover. Women who don't breastfeed are made to feel like horrible failures who are selfishly denying their children. But now women who discuss breastfeeding into the toddler years are warned that they're ruining their children for the rest of their lives.

The fact is, we all seem to feel comfortable passing judgment on parents for big or small offences. So often, we see extreme stories like "Tan Mom" and we don't have a problem piling on the negativity.

Maybe I'm still a little defensive, but I think in general that the kids will be alright. The new generation of little ones will adapt to the cultural changes just like we have. It's the moms that I worry about. What divisive parenting practice will come up next, leaving a whole new set of moms open to ridicule and hostility?

Obviously, I think it's important to talk about parenting. I do it everyday. I think that having discussions about parenting practices helps us all make more informed decisions. But I also think that this openness and communication has led to the vilification of moms for big and little offenses alike.

We don't have to agree on everything. But as parents, maybe we should start trying to support each other, even when criticism feels like the natural reaction.

Pregnancy

Watch your weight

If an expectant mother hopes to limit her chances of giving birth to an abnormally large baby, new research suggests her wisest course of action would be to control her own weight both before and during her pregnancy.

The study, published in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, challenges a growing consensus in the scientific community that elevated glucose levels in the mother are primarily responsible for overly large babies, a condition known as macrosomia.

That data, published in the online issue of the Journal of Maternal Fetal and Neonatal Medicine, found that excessive weight gained during pregnancy increased the chance of producing a large baby regardless of whether the mother herself was overweight.

Paint your way to cleaner air

Damage control. Can a new kind of paint 'react to pollutants and neutralize them'? Metro investigates

life@metronews.ca

Most efforts to combat air pollution focus on keeping pollutants from hitting the air in the first place.

Ultimately, that simply isn't possible — especially in the world's biggest, most polluted cities.

But now an innovative company in the Philippines has found a way to remove dangerous nitrogen oxides (NOx) from the air in traffic-snarled Manila.

Pollution solution?

"One square meter of our paints cleans as much NOx as a mature tree. One artwork of a thousand square metres is really like planting a thousand trees."

Johnson Ongking, vice-president of Boysen Paints

... Using paint.

"We're trying to turn something that is harmful to human health and the environment into something that is essentially harmless," says Johnson Ongking, vice-president of Boysen Paints.

The product — called Boysen KNOxOUT — is an exciting new use for titanium dioxide, a chemical commonly used to make paint white.

"When you make it into a really small size, you amplify its ability to react to pollutants and neutralize them," Ongking explains.

"It also gives the paint self-cleaning properties. It's really powerful stuff."

Basically, the paint reacts with light and the water vapour in the air, snagging NOx and converting it into calcium nitrate, a far less dangerous compound.

"Calcium nitrate is used as a fertilizer," he adds. "So, in essence, what you've done is locked up a harmful gas into a solid particle, that can just be washed off the wall."

The paint causes the reaction, but isn't actually consumed by it. This means the titanium dioxide catalyst never gets saturated.

"As long as the paint's on the wall and you've got a source of light, the process just keeps going on. It's really the water vapour molecules doing the work."

The paint's potential:

Tests at high-pollution traffic junctions in Manila are showing a 20 per cent drop in NOx levels.

The company is now commissioning eight gigantic roadside murals to be painted with KNOxOUT — each a thousand-square metres.

"One of the things people do when they want to help the environment is to go plant a tree," Ongking says. "One square meter of our paints cleans as much NOx as a mature tree. One artwork of a thousand square metres is really like planting a thousand trees."

Early results are so encouraging, the paint is now being studied by cities around the world.

"There's been really strong interest," he concludes. "Air pollution is a problem globally."

Take that, pollutants: Boysen KNOxOUT paint can help remove dangerous nitrogen oxides from the air. ISTOCK IMAGES

Become part of the NP team

A nurse practitioner (NP) just might be the hottest career in health care. These nurses provide primary care that includes health promotion and illness prevention, too — skills that are needed in today's world.

But that's not all.

A nurse practitioner is a registered nurse with additional education and experience, which allows for a broader role than that of a registered nurse. A nurse practitioner can diagnose patients, prescribe most medications and order diagnostics tests such as X-rays and ultrasounds as well as lab work and blood work.

"The nursing perspective and blend that the nurse practitioner can bring is a perfect opportunity to provide improved care, and it also improves access for patients," says Claudio Mariano, president of Nurse Practitioners' Association of Ontario.

"We are responsible for providing clinical care to patients and managing chronic disease like diabetes and high blood pressure and just for providing routine wellness care and health screening in the context of physical examinations and general wellness care and health promotion."

The nurse practitioner is always part of a team, employed in community clinics, health-care centres, doctors' offices, nursing homes and emergency departments of hospitals.

"Nurse practitioners have played a valuable and essential role in the system for many decades," says Judith Shamian, president, Canadian Nurses Association. "Given the stress the health-care system is currently under, now is the time to realize just how much more value nurse practitioners can bring to Canadians' health care."

To apply to a nurse practitioner program, you have to be a registered nurse with a four-year undergraduate degree in nursing and a minimum of two years experience as an RN.

For more information, contact the college of nurses or the nurse practitioners' association in your province or territory. YLVA VAN BUUREN

Career checkup

Trends. Chronic diseases and elder care will impact health-care field in the coming years

YLVA VAN BUUREN
For Metro

The aging population and the prevalence of chronic diseases are two huge trends that will impact careers in health care in Canada in coming years.

"We must think through how we organize health-care services for the growing population of seniors," says Judith Shamian, president of the Canadian Nurses Association, Ottawa, "to make sure they stay as healthy and functional and at home for as long as possible."

According to the Canadian Institute of Health Information (CIHI), 93 per cent of seniors live at home and that's where they would like to stay for as long as possible.

At the same time, chronic diseases such as diabetes, heart disease, obesity and cancer are now the biggest global cost drivers in health care, says Shamian.

Here is a look at how these trends may translate into health-care careers.

DISEASE MANAGEMENT AND PREVENTION

By 2025, one in four Canadians will be older than the age of 65. And three-quarters of seniors have at least one chronic health condition, says Kathleen Morris, director of health system analysis and emerging issues at CIHI, Ottawa.

"Today we manage the disease," says Shamian, "but we're not managing the lifestyle factors that increase the risk of chronic diseases, nor the prevention."

Doctors, nurses and physical therapists are key, but patients (young and old) need "preventive" counselling, too — how management and healthy lifestyle habits may prevent conditions from worsening (or developing in the first place).

GERONTOLOGY

There is a growing need for health-care providers who specialize in the elderly. Research shows that seniors actually do better when they are cared for by doctors who specialize in the care of older adults — or geriatricians, says Dr. Ken Rockwood, geriatrician, professor and director of geriatric medicine research at Dalhousie University, Halifax.

INTEGRATED CARE

"As people age, they have more than one illness, and often more than one illness active at a time," says Rockwood. Integrated care will become more important with collaboration between the different health professionals.

HOME HEALTH CARE

Home health care is important for seniors who want to remain at home, but also because people are increasingly discharged early from hospital and still require continuing care, says Pam Nordstrom, director of the School of Nursing at Mount Royal University in Calgary.

Along with traditional health services such as nursing, physiotherapy and mental health support there may also be supportive roles in helping co-ordinate and deliver the range of services needed.

TECHNOLOGY

Engineering and computer sciences have a role in health care because they can help make a home and public facilities more senior friendly — from memory aids to bigger utensils and shower chairs.

SUPPORT SERVICES

Manpower forecasts an increase in non-clinical jobs in health care such as medical clerks and assistants, bilingual service reps, health and safety co-ordinators, and clinical data managers.

"These jobs are not age discriminate," says Michelle Dunnill, Toronto branch manager, Manpower, "and often great for people changing careers."

There is also a need for senior support services such as snow shovelling, home maintenance and transportation.

Hospitals. A little bit of joy during trying times

JON TATTRIE
For Metro

In a busy hospital for children, young patients may be overwhelmed by the doctors, nurses and technicians buzzing in and out of their room — which makes the unexpected appearance of a hospital clown all the more wondrous.

One of the most established programs in Canada is at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children. Kathleen Le Roux worked as a therapeutic clown there for 10 years and is a founding member of the Canadian Association of Therapeutic Clowns.

"It was joyful, it was exciting, it was sad at times, it was moving, it was playful. It was many things," she says of her work at the hospital. "The goals and benefits of therapeutic clown work are to help alleviate stress and to improve the quality of life of those coping with illness. Therapeutic clowns focus on patients' abilities and strengths, always seeking to empower and give choice to the patient."

The clowns also work with medical professionals to monitor a child's recovery, for example, reporting how children with brain injuries improve in their eye-tracking of the clown's movements.

Getting work as a hospital clown requires a strong background in clowning. You can study clowning as part of a theatre degree, at a workshop, or at professional schools in France. From there, therapeutic clowns take a six-month or year mentorship for hospital work.

Le Roux cautions clowning is not a career for the faint of heart.

"It means examining the self because the clown is really oneself in your full authenticity. It's one of the scariest things to do. You really have to accept yourself; all of your great strengths and weaknesses and vulnerabilities."

Common themes

Kapp has identified four common themes of video game design that can be applied to college-level lesson plans.

1. A challenge put forth at the outset of the course.
2. Integration of the student's experience into a narrative.
3. Constant feedback on individual progress.
4. A freedom to fail without penalty.

BRUCE WALSH
Metro News in Philadelphia

When you open up a new video game, do you read the instructions? Of course not.

It's just more fun to jump in and start pressing buttons. And, according to author Karl M. Kapp, that's an instinct that educators should harness.

In his latest book, The Gamification of Learning and Instruction, Kapp lays out his vision for appropriating the principles of video game design for the classroom.

Surprisingly, his theories have little to do with online learning and more to do with the nuts and bolts of the traditional classroom.

"If we're clever about it, we can get to what really matters in games: It gives people a sense of purpose and mission, and it taps into our internal drives to overcome challenges," says Kapp, a professor at Bloomsburg University.

"It's about thinking like a game designer. They think challenge first, interactivity first, engagement first."

In training, we tend to think content first. But content doesn't mean anything unless it's in a certain context."

For Kapp, at the heart of a well-designed course is providing students with an opportunity to learn as they fail — to throw away the instruction manual and get right to work.

"Recently I oversaw an investigator training class, and the first day they said: 'Today we're going to learn the model for investigating,'" explains Kapp.

"I think that's a bad model. As soon as the person walks into the class, you should say, 'Look, someone's been accused of embezzling $10,000. What are you going to do?'"

People will judge you within seconds. As lovely as you may be, a sloppy handshake is likely to leave a bad impression.

"A handshake needs to be firm, but not too firm. Make sure you look the person in the eye as you clasp their hand and not over their shoulder," says etiquette and protocol expert William Hanson.

Look the part: look after yourself

How can you look after an account if you're incapable of looking after yourself? Hanson believes everything about you needs to be perfect, "make sure your clothes fit, your shoes are polished and your laces aren't frayed. Don't give the impression you just rolled out of bed." When you exchange business cards with a client, never pull out the one you had scrunched up at the bottom of your bag. Keep them in a case so they don't get damaged. It's also crucial you check the details (title and number) are up to date before handing it out insists Hanson.

Hesjedal storms to victory in Italy

Giro d'Italia. 31-year-old is first Canadian to win one of cycling's three major tour races

Canada's Ryder Hesjedal didn't realize history was within his grasp until he was about five kilometres from the Giro d'Italia finish line.

Aware he had a chance to overcome Joaquin Rodriguez's 31-second overall lead in Sunday's final stage, Hesjedal broke out onto the streets of Milan determined to keep victory from slipping away.

Only near the end did he find out he would become the first Canadian to win one of cycling's three major tour races.

"Nothing anyone could have said to me could have changed how hard I rode," he said.

Hesjedal took 34 minutes 15 seconds to complete Sunday's 28.2-kilometre individual time trial in sixth — 20 places ahead of his Spanish rival. His 16-second margin of victory was the second closest in Giro history.

"It's just been an unreal experience from Day 1, what the team was able to do. It's unbelievable," said the Victoria native, who finished the race in 91 hours 39 minutes two seconds. "This is incredible. It's a dream come true."

Like the rest of the riders, Hesjedal had been through a demanding mountain ride to

Bright future

Hesjedal, only the third non-Italian to win the Giro d'Italia in 15 years, said that his win will do wonders for cycling in Victoria and hopefully inspires the next generation of Canadian cyclists.

"Yesterday was extremely hard," he said. "I got through it and I knew as I was on the helicopter descending into Milan that I still had a shot. This mor-

Though he hadn't taken his victory chances seriously before the race, Hesjedal's thinking started to change after he first wore the overall leader's pink jersey in Stage 7.

"The day I pulled on the jersey for the first time, I knew I was good and could accomplish something great and that drove me harder."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper was among the Canadians celebrating.

"This remarkable win in one of bicycle racing's most gruelling competitions is a testimony to Mr. Hesjedal's training, endurance, skill and competitive spirit," Harper said in a statement.

DeBoer steered Devils back on track

Peter DeBoer talks to the media in Newark, N.J., on May 15. THE CANADIAN PRESS

NHL. A year after being fired as coach of Florida, Peter DeBoer has guided New Jersey to Stanley Cup final

Peter DeBoer, in the eyes of many, was a surprise choice as the next coach of the New Jersey Devils. Fresh off the franchise's worst season in recent memory, Devils general manager Lou Lamoriello last summer turned to DeBoer to rescue a team that was low on morale, lower on scoring punch and desperate for a new identity.

But why DeBoer? In three seasons with Florida, he could not push the Panthers into the post-season once.

"You have to go through ups and downs," Lamoriello said on July 19, 2011, after introducing DeBoer. "I think what he went through (in Florida) just made him a better coach. And I felt that in the conversations we had — because of the questions that were asked — the answers that were given were open, down to earth and honest."

swers. He has results. After leading New Jersey to 102 points in the regular season and placing the Devils back in the playoffs after missing the tournament last year for the first time since 1996, DeBoer calmly quarterbacked the organization's fifth run to the Stanley Cup final.

And the path taken is what will be a lasting memory not only within this proud organization, but for the fans as well. Win or lose against Los Angeles in the final, which opens with Game 1 in New Jersey on Wednesday night, DeBoer's first three playoff-series victories will be etched in minds for a long time.

"You know, this is a resilient group," DeBoer said. "We've just been getting better and better. Just like our season, we talked about a slow build. So, we're trending in the right direction, and I think we're playing our best hockey right now." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
